France. Fashion during the Second Republic. 1848 to 1864.

Illustration: Louis-Napoleon Bonaparte in Boulogne Landing in August 1840 , anonymous 1848 — THE PRINCE-PRESIDENT In 1848, there was revolution in France again. He was to nominate the members of the council of state, whose duty it was to prepare the laws, and of the senate, a body permanently established as a constituent part of the empire.

Second French Empire

The photograph is in fact a photomontage composed of separate images of Napoleon III, the Empress Eugenie and the Prince Impérial. It included the demolition of crowded and unhealthy medieval neighborhoods; the building of wide avenues, parks, and squares; the annexation of the suburbs surrounding Paris; and the construction of new sewers, fountains, and aqueducts. The Marie Stuart and the Valois head-dresses were both in fashion; the latter being adopted by young and pretty women who wished to be conspicuous.

France (Napoleon III)

The Emperor support of the Polish rebels alienated the Russian leadership.

Napoleon III

He helped to rapidly promote rapid economic modernisation, but his army battled diehard insurgents who had American support.
