Elizabeth Heale was a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English at the University of Reading and is now an Honorary Research Fellow. He has published essays on Renaissance literature in PMLA, Modern Philology, Shakespeare, and elsewhere.

A member of the Stanford faculty since 2001, he is co-chair and founder of two research workshops in which most of his PhD students participate: Renaissances and Poetics. Roland Greene's research and teaching are concerned with the early modern literatures of England, Latin Europe, and the transatlantic world, and with poetry and poetics from the Renaissance to the present.
