South Africa: Overcoming Apartheid

If that is not a condition of slavery, it bears a close resemblance to it. After this incident, Tamana returned to the family home but was unable to meet subsistence needs on the land.

Dora Tamana stood for oppressed women, the women in the Country side and the deep of villages. She began to lose her friends to oversees countries due to hostile and deliberate intimidation by local police. We must also refuse to compound women struggles and emancipation as an event of the month of August.

Dora Tamana

In 1923, Dora and John got married and in 1930 the couple moved to Cape Town.

However, her tenure was cut short as she was elected, with Lilian Ngoyi, to attend a World Congress of Mothers in Switzerland, and then to visit China and Russia. For a time afterward, she served the Communist Party in various capacities, but eventually, she decided that she must dedicate her energy to fighting the government's attempts to wipe out her community.
