Infographic: how climate change is affecting Europe

For fires, causes are often related to socioeconomic factors which render the control of the causes complex since they often indicate conflicts and tensions in the overall system of land management. In Europe, most of the roughly EUR 9 billion annual losses caused by drought affect agriculture, the energy sector and the public water supply.

Climate Change: Global Sea Level

Published by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Evidence suggests most conflict is likely to occur between local communities, socioeconomic groups, and states, while bilateral and multilateral interactions have shown evidence of formal cooperation over resources. For example, Bangladesh, the Netherlands, and Guyana are particularly at-risk.

Small climate changes can have devastating local consequences

From past decisions to forward-looking views — the story of Estonian waste management developments Harri Moora, Programme Director at SEI Tallinn, and Peeter Eek, who works for the environmental consultancy firm Earthcare, both have over 20 years of experience working with sustainable waste management.
