

Law & practice of Qisas & diyat

Irfan Law Book House - Commonly Requested U.S. Laws and Regulations

Description: -

- In Pakistan, the present criminal justice system is primarily based upon the codified penal and procedural laws designed by the British masters in the colonial era of British Indian history.
- It includes the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898 and Penal Code of 1860.
- These criminal laws did not provide any concept of restorative justice.
- Our system is still based upon the accusatorial principle i.e. the state is a party in any criminal transaction.
- Punishment of the offender as a rule has been provided as the only penalty for the criminals instead of extending any relief/ remedy to the victim.
- It truly speaks of the underlying objective that the state is interested in maintaining order and unit of the state in the society instead of taking care of the victim.
