On palpation, there is a firm nodule in the subcutaneous tissue under the area of redness that is freely mobile with respect to the bony structures underneath it. He excelled at teaching and received the outstanding teacher award so many times that he was elected to the Outstanding Faculty Hall of Fame in 1982. Cutis marmorata is the term used for mottling of the skin; in this case, the mottling is of the congenital, telangiectatic variety.

Skin

If an imaginary line is drawn from the outer canthus of the eye straight back to the occiput here the occiput is just where the edge of the blanket meets the head a low set ear will fall completely below the line.

Port wine stains on the face may be associated with , and those on the extremities may be associated with , in which overgrowth of an extremity may occur. Typically, the bruising is similar to that which occurs normally during the process of delivery except for the fact that it is well circumscribed. Symptomatic care and good diaper hygiene with thorough drying before the diaper is replaced is recommended.

Atlas of the Newborn, Volume 4: Dermatology and Perinatal Infection

Although mottling occurs commonly in newborns exposed to cool temperatures, it is transient disappears with rewarming and more generalized than this. For this baby, Aquaphor was liberally applied to the skin, and the infant was kept in an isolette to minimize fluid losses.
