Zambia's amazingly wide spectrum of mineral resources spans a range of metals, particularly copper-cobalt and gold, gemstones, a variety of industrial minerals and potential energy resources - uranium, coal and hydrocarbons.

ENERGY POLICY AND PLANNING IN INDIA

Case study 5 - The Chapare region study, Bolivia PROBLEM SUMMARY Creating an Economic Base to Support Colonization - Integrated Development Study of the Chapare Region Bolivia The Chapare study 1978-79 was initiated to integrate and rationalize resource development in a 24,500 km² area open to colonization. While some countries such as the United Kingdom, Argentina, and Uruguay in the 1970s removed most of their capital controls in a short period, most countries have followed a more gradual approach of first relaxing constraints on trade-related capital flows, then restrictions on longer-term foreign direct and portfolio investment flows, and finally on short-term financial flows.

ENERGY POLICY AND PLANNING IN INDIA

In contrast, the stock of capital declined during 1989-90 as a number of countries in our sample initiated successful stabilization programs. It was also for the first time that statewise growth and other monitorable targets had been worked out in consultation with the States.

Whilst the earlier individual dock groups had already been declared obsolete, the sweeping changes announced in 1970 had dramatically changed the whole scale of run-down in East London. In two respects, this popular movement has set the stage for the future development of education in Zambia: it sets down a major parameter for the structure of the education system, and it points to the all-important role of the community in educational provision. By adopting Generalised Method of Moments GMM estimation approach, this paper aims to examine the relationship between sustainability disclosure and the firm financial performance for Malaysian public listed firms for the period from 2013 to 2017.
