The beauty of Frank Lloyd Wright's furniture designs is that while many of us wish we could live in one of his houses, his chairs, tables, and sofas connect us directly to his architecture, and to the history he made. Working with archivists at The Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation in Scottsdale,

Arizona, Copeland Furniture selects those designs that best exemplify Wright's design and aesthetic principles. Between these bars, on each side, are three short curved rungs like a ladder.

Whenever we tour Wright sites, we take photos of such details when we're allowed. The large red floor tiles in the Rosenbaum House, the only Wright home in Alabama, are very typical of Wright's interior aesthetic and can even be found in more elegant mansions such as Wingspread. The original Barrel Chair was designed by Wright for his Taliesin property.
