Rival Claims to a Changing Arctic

Separate attention is devoted to the potential for cooperation between the European Union and the United States in this regard. Having the navies and coast guards of several nations working together in this operation sends a message that their alliance and presence in the region is strong, according to the naval officers.

Canada and the Arctic: The Issue of Northern Sovereignty

LOSC Article 234 — Special Rights for

Arctic Coastal States The LOSC, in Article 234, grants coastal States authority to specially regulate ice covered areas within their national jurisdiction. Several incidents, noted Byers and Huebert, have demonstrated Canada's current inability to conduct adequate surveillance of its northern territory. Establishing Maritime Boundaries in Arctic Waters

In terms of its actions, Russia has exercised measures that can be classified as conducive to both defensive realism and pragmatic cooperation. While increased access to the Arctic offers advantages in terms of commerce and tourism, it has also ushered in a new era of maritime security issues for Arctic nations.

Canada Makes a Claim to the North Pole

Areas in red are in the 2001 claim only.
