I highly recommend it for anyone interested in the subject, or in detailed accounts of early war dog fights where the Japanese Zero commanded the skies, but was opposed by brave men flying the P-40 far beyond their expected roles. Alligevel lykkedes det for et antal piloter, som ikke var særlig godt uddannet, med det tilbageværende materiel at tage kampen op imod de Japanske fly. Destruction at Iba Field was so complete the Zeros flew on to Clark Field to find targets for their remaining ammunition.

They were then diverted to Australia, with new orders to ferry the P-40s to the Philippines from Australia through the Dutch East Indies.
