The Llŷn Peninsula is a beautiful part of Wales. The have also been extensively mined since the seventeenth century around. On Monday morning last, a letter was received by Mr William Jones, of this town, written by a friend at Milford Haven, South Wales, which said, that the brig Ann, his property, timber-laden, from Quebec, for Pwllheli, which was dismasted and abandoned three months since, about the middle of the Western Ocean, had been driven ashore, on Friday morning the 1st, near St.
