Egypt Law

In its rationale for punishing the media outlet, state officials that al-Mashed published sexually explicit material, defamed a female artist, and disrupted public order. In 2018, six reporters were arrested in for reporting on a New York Times article detailing vote buying. Those who adhere to the civil law tradition seek to remove as much of the human element as possible from interpreting and applying legal texts in order to minimize the potential for injustices from an inconsistent application of the law from case to case as a result of human bias and consideration of such subjective factors as sympathy.
