The Indigenisation As A Construct Economics Essay

The study will mainly focus on platinum and diamond mines. This is one of the early indigenisation attempts in the manufacturing industry. The Indigenisation and Economic Empowerment Act chapter 14:33 and the supporting statutory instrument regulations related to notices clearly spell out that the programme is meant to benefit ordinary Zimbabweans who were previously disadvantaged by the settler regime.

This study will be significant in that it will look at the impacts of indigenisation and economic empowerment on FDI in developing countries in Africa, the main focus being on Zimbabwe.

The impact of mining on sustainable practices and the traditional culture of developing countries

In 2007 the government passed the Indigenisation and Economic Empowerment Act to ensure that majority ownership in foreign owned enterprises is controlled by indigenous black Zimbabweans. The concept is given varying names in different countries but the objectives are the same. Department of Labour, Bureau of Labour Statistics, 1993.

The Indigenisation As A Construct Economics Essay

Indigenisation and Economic Empowerment initiative is therefore a mirror image of other empowerment programmes implemented in other countries around the world. The chapter also looks at indigenisation in other countries and Zimbabwe as well. The final part of this chapter looks at whether the objectives of indigenisation and economic empowerment were met in countries where the initiative was implemented and then its consequences.
