The Elimination of All Forms of Forced or Compulsory Labour

Most child labour is carried out in the agricultural sector, mainly due to poverty and the difficulties faced by parents. Except in respect of the kinds of labour provided for in article 10 of this Convention, the following limitations and conditions shall apply: a Whenever possible prior determination by a medical officer appointed by the administration that the persons concerned are not suffering from any infectious or contagious disease and that they are physically fit for the work required and for the conditions under which it is to be carried out; b Exemption of school teachers and pupils and of officials of the administration in general; c The maintenance in each community of the number of adult able-bodied men indispensable for family and social life; d Respect for conjugal and family ties. Trafficking in persons is now covered by an agreed international definition.

Convention Concerning the Abolition of Forced Labour, Entry into force: 17 Jan 1959

Blackett, Making domestic work visible: The case for specific regulation, Labour Law and Labour Relations Branch ILO, Geneva, 1998 , p. Topics that are brought to the fore are the education of risk groups, the protection of workers who use recruitment and placement services, the formulation of the principle of non-liability for offences that victims were compelled to commit, and the care and protection of victims, including compensation. One way in which traffickers tend to put themselves into a threatening position is to confiscate the identity papers of the person they move for employment purposes.

Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention

For the purposes of subparagraph c of the preceding paragraph, the regulations provided for in article 23 of this Convention shall fix the proportion of the resident adult able-bodied males who may be taken at any one time for forced or compulsory labour, provided always that this proportion shall in no case exceed 25 per cent. Information and awareness campaigns The legislation on forced labour should support the organization of public information campaigns in conjunction with workers' representatives, the media, NGOs, human rights organizations, religious organizations and community groups to inform workers of their rights and to raise public awareness of forced labour. Another example of forced labour arises where villagers, whether they want to or not, have to provide substantial help in the construction of roads, the digging of irrigation channels, etc.
